the future will need to be as much of a chemist as an expert on timber, on the basis of the picture drawn before a recent meeting of the Associated Foresters at the University ber company operating in Idaho, to illustrate the changing conditions in the industry, and the remarkable experiments being made with cellulose, the essential constituent of trees and other plant bodies, were hinted at.

Mr. Humiston had a paper wash cloth made from wood, which will withstand boiling. The synthetic lumber was made from sugar cane, some from cornstalks and some from sawmill waste exploded like popcorn or puffed grains and then com-pressed. He spoke of one large and pressed. He spoke of one large and prosperous plant making synthetic foundation's headquarters in them-prosperous plant making synthetic foundation's headquarters in themregion which from the standpoint of the average lumberman did not contain a single merchantable tree within a radius of 100 miles.

Chemistry Has Big Rôle Chemistry will play an important rôle in the utilization of tamarack, a common Northwest wood species so heavy that freight on it makes cutting almost prohibitive, it was pointed out From this wood can be extracted a valuable carbohydrate, galactan. After this material, which accounts for most of the excess weight, has been extracted the remaining wood chips can be made into synthetic lumber, he believed Used this way, he felt that tamarack will show a surprising profit instead of the pres-

It is a Pleasure to Use Face Powder This Way

APPLYING face powder before the skin is ready for it invariably means a waste of powder and a sacrifice of the best results. Powder clings best when the skin has first been correctly prepared to receive it.

For those with a naturally oily or moist skin, LUCILLE BUHL LIQUID POWDER BASE is especially helpful. It is a delightfully creamy liquid which supplies a smooth, moist base for the powder and gives a soft, velvety finish to the skin. Prepared in two shades—Naturelle, for blonde and fair; Light Brunette for medium and dark. Per Bottle, $1.25.

If your skin is dry, LUCILLE BUHL PROTECTION CREAM is suited to your needs. Although commonly called a "vanishing cream," it provides a smooth, transparent base for the effective application of face powder. Delicately scented and flesh pink in color, it has become a popular toiletry with many

HOOVER POINTS TO URUGUAY'S 'MORAL WEIGHT'

Cites Little Nation's Cultural Gifts to World in Montevideo Speech

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay-In coming to Uruguay, the smallest republic of South America, Herbert Hoover not only gave voice to the traditional co-operation between it and the United States, but in a brief address here he directed attention to the qualities that go to make for greatness in the two nations.

His remarks, brief as they were were significant coming at this time and being delivered here near the zone of hostilities between Bolivia and Paraguay. These two countries with territories and natural resources of far greater extent than Uruguay are among the most backward on the southern continent, while Uruguay is among the most advanced, politically, culturally and economically.

"In the contributions of the leaders of Uruguay to the science of jurisprudence, both in the national and international fields, the country has international fields, the country has given proofs of great cultivation of mind and at same time demonstrated that the moral weight of nations is based not upon size or numbers, but upon the character of its people," Mr. Hoover said in response to a warm speech of welcome by President

By behind him." 1930, its centenary, it proposes to have completed hard-surface highways covering every section of the land. Its pension laws, measures for rence, Liam O'Flaherty, Lawrence the protection of workers, and its Housman, Rebecca West, Lord Curjudicial system are in step with the zon, Hilaire Belloc and Beverly best in the world.

It is completing a national capitol building that will cost $17,000,000 when finished and be one of the finest in the world. In showing Mr. Hoover over this magnificent edifice built entirely out of beautiful Uruguayan marble, President Campiste-guy said: "Instead of putting our money into arms and ships we put it into this building as a monument to our people."

At another place in his speech Mr. Hoover emphasized the American republics' need for greater knowledge of each other, saying:
"Sometimes I think relations be tween nations bear humble comparion to relations between neighbors in our busy private lives.

"Crowded with domestic problems, we really know little of our neigh-bors; we read in the press sensa-tional accidents; we know the gossip of unworthy members of their families; we read descriptions of their homes. But we know little of the finer qualities of their home life; their deep affections, their sorself-denials,

"I have hoped that I might, by this visit, symbolize the courtesy call the society," Mr. McEachern said, from one good neighbor to another that might convey respect and esteem and desire for intellectual and spiritual co-operation."

Since 1910 the Uruguayan Government has been stable and progressive. Previous to that year, however, its political career was a history of 80 years' fierce fued between two clans — the Colorados and the Blancos. Then occurred the most re-markable revolution of all; outraged public opinion demanded internal peace and enforced its wishes.

New Economic Well-Being - A ban was put on the traditional political methods of the Colorados and the Blancos and rigidly enforced. The result was a tremendous economic expansion and widespread prosperity. With that economic wellbeing Uruguay has grown socially and cuturally.

The University of Montevideo is one of the best in the Western Hemisphere and its jurists are internationally famous.

For its size Uruguay is the great-est cattle country in the world. Cattle and wool are the great products and upon them rests the pros-perity of the Nation.

In the last 15 years United States interests have increased from $5,000,000 to $70,000,000 in packing plants, telephones, telegraphs, cables, power plants, national and municipal bonds. Uruguay looks to the United States to protect its national sovereignty and is a traditional sup-porter of the United States in international affairs.

This is clear when it is considered that an increase of membership on the basis of the 1920 census of 483 would have satisfied every state, without decreasing any delegation; whereas a similar method of resolving the difficulty on the basis of the anticipated 1930 returns, will mean a House swollen to 535 mempers, 100 more than at present!

Sofia Gets New Tsankoff Daily

Publication of Journal Regarded of Considerable Political Importance

BY WIRELESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR SOFIA—The appearance of a new daily paper in Sofia, Lutch, published and edited by a group of supporters of Alexander Tsankoff, former Prime Minister and now president of the National Assembly, is an event of considerable political importance. Professor Tsankoff was chief of the conspirators who overthrew the agrarian cabinet of Alexander Stamboulisky in 1923. He then became Prime Minister and directed the Government 21/2 years, forming in that time the present governing party (democratic entente) out of his own group called the national entente and the People's Party, and a fraction of the Democratic and Radical Parties. Early in 1926 he was replaced by his colleague Andrew Liaptcheff, since which time he has played a somewhat secondary part in Bulgarian affairs. Last spring Professor Tsankoff brought about a cabinet crisis, and more recently A. D. Buroff, now Foreign Minister, precipitated the fall of the entire ministry. One of the chief causes of disagreement was the Macedonian question. Mr. Buroff and Professor Tsankoff favor a rapprochement with Jugoslavia and the doing away with the Macedonian revolu-tionary organization, while the Premier's group is against such a policy. The new daily directed by Professor

The new daily directed by Professor Tsankoff can only mean that his group is going to press its joint view, even though it endangers the unity of the governing party.

Public opinion in Bulgaria, however, because of the quarrel between Belgrade and Zagreb, is mobilizing on the side of nationalism and Mr. Liaptcheff.

Education of Legislators on Changed Public Opinion Advocated in Report

SPECIAL PROM MONITOR BUREAU NEW YORK-Sentiment throughout the United States favoring the abolition of capital punishment has increased decidedly in strength and influence during the last year, ac-cording to a report on several conferences held in western states just issued by the League to Abolish Capital Punishment.

The "uselessness, inequality and liability to error" of capital sentences, the report said, are the chief reasons contributing to the general recognition why their abolition is a practical and most desirable reform. Conference of Workers

Simplicity of design means better Performance

"Make it better—make it simpler" has always been the keynote of Ford engineering and manufacturing methods. This policy has been carried forward to its highest, fullest expression in the new Ford.

You see evidence of a carefully planned simplicity of design the instant you lift the hood. Its value becomes increasingly apparent when you drive the new Ford.

Smoothness, quick acceleration, remarkable hill-climbing ability, speed of 55 to 65 miles an hour—all these are brought to you in the new Ford without sacrificing economy and reliability. The whole tendency is to give you the most performance with the least machinery.

This applies not only to the engine but to every detail of the electrical, ignition, cooling, lubrication and fuel systems. The engine itself is but one part of a motor car.

An example of Ford simplicity of design

Take the engine lubrication system. It is a combination of pump, splash and gravity feed and is unusually reliable and effective. There is but one movable part — the pump.

From valve chamber down, the entire flow of oil is as simple in principle as water running downhill. Ford design and Ford manufacturing methods have made it trouble-free. The only thing for you to do is to see that the oil level never falls below low (L).

Only one high-tension cable in ignition system

This same trouble-saving simplicity of designis shown also in the Ford ignition system, which reflects much that is new in mechanical design.

A particularly unique feature is the elimination of high-tension cables from the distributor to the spark-plugs, these connections being made by means of thin bronze springs. There is but one high-tension cable and this connects the coil on the dash with the distributor.

The distributor head itself is water-proof and has been specially designed to prevent short circuits from rain, snow, etc.

Another exclusive Ford development is shown in the construction of the housing of the steering gear mechanism. This is made of three steel forgings, electrically welded together.

The housing is then electrically welded to the steering column, thus making a onepiece steel unit. Many other vital parts of the new Ford are also electrically welded, permitting the use of steel forgings instead of stampings or castings and giving greater simplicity and strength than if several parts were riveted or bolted together.

More steel forgings, in fact, are used in the new Ford than in almost any other car, regardless of price.

All six brakes are silent and fully enclosed

Equally important to good performance is the design of the brakes on the new Ford. The six-brake system is unusually safe, reliable and effective because both the four-wheel service brakes and the separate emergency or parking brakes are of the mechanical, internal-expanding type, with all braking surfaces fully enclosed for protection against water, sand, dirt and grease.

For many years this has been recognized as the ideal combination. It is now brought to you on the new Ford because a simple, easy way has been found to accommodate two sets of full internal brakes in a two-in-one brake drum of great strength on the rear wheels.

A further improvement is effected by the self-centering feature of the fourwheel brakes—an exclusive Ford development. Through this construction, The new Ford Coupe is distinguished by the trim sturdiness of its lines and beautiful colors. An unusually good choice for the woman driver because it is so reliable, safe and easy to control. The Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield is an important safety feature.

Everywhere you go, you note the smooth speed, power and acceleration of the new Ford—its alert, capable performance in traffic, on hills and on the open road. It has set a new standard for a low-priced car.

the entire surface of the shoe is brought in contact with the drum the instant you press your foot on the brake pedal. This prevents screeching and howling and makes the Ford brakes unusually silent.

Such simplicity of design is not easy to achieve. Yet it is the first essential of good performance in a low-priced car.

It is made possible only through Ford manufacturing and production methods and the experience gained in making more than fifteen million automobiles.

Back of the new Ford is a larger purpose than the making or selling of a motor car. It is to bring the benefits of modern, economical transportation to all the people and to help every motorist get the greatest possible use from his car over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense. That is the reason for the value that has been put into the new Ford. That is the reason for its outstanding performance.

Princeton Club Players Have a Field Day in Second Round

NEW YORK—Princeton Club players enjoyed a field day in the playing of the second round of the Yale Club invitation squash tennis for the Clyde Martin Trophy, Monday afternoon, when five of the 16 places in the third round were filled by members of the team from the Princeton Club. Harold R. Mixsell led off as the senior member followed in turn by Arnold Wood. R. Mixsell led off as the senior member, followed in turn by Arnold Wood Jr. the junior member, and by Armin W. Riley. But it was the two remaining winners that furnished the sensations. First, Stuart M. Sperry, still in the Class B ranks, defeated Burdett H. O'Connor. No. 1 in the national ranking, and then Gavin Brackensides, who has resumed play after a ridge, who has resumed play after ridge, who has resumed play after a year lapse, not being ranked last year, scored over Edward R. Projected Merger to Affect Large Part of American Cotton Section

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU LONDON-London offices of the big Drink Bill Alone banks have come to the conclusion that the most feasible scheme for amalgamation of the mills spinning American cotton is the Lancashire Cotton Corporation, which has been sponsored by the Cotton Yarn Association, Ltd. It is hoped to start the amalgamation with a minimum of 10,000,000 spindles, as opposed to the 2,000,000 originally hoped for, and to merge at least one-third of the American section under one control

A textile expert declares: "The banks have acted with great forbearance and have tried to avoid as long as possible the semblance of offen-sive action at a time of great distress. Losses have continued to mount as the result of production sold below cost, with very serious consequences to the profitable working of bank customers who had been no parties to the inflation of mill plant." Combine for Shipments

A second development of importance is the formation of the Eastern three years. Textile Association, Ltd., which plans to develop the consignment of cotton piece goods to foreign markets under the joint auspices of spinners, manu-facturers, merchants, bleachers, of these servicts, estimated to dyers, and shippers. This is the first amount to nearly £7,300,000 was vertical combine to be formed in the less than the amount spent last

'Myself and Son" operated under the name of "Anna Katherine Green and Son," and Salley, the Maryland historian, says of her, "Under her management neither the Gazette nor the public printing suffered retrenchment or deterioration." In 1768 the Assembly indicated their approval of her work and voted her in payment the sum of "nine hundred and fortyeight dollars and one-half dollar" together with other payments to be made annually.

to Board of Trade

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU NEW YORK-Solution of the traffic problem moved a step nearer here through the appointment of a committee of 45 outstanding citizens who are to ascertain the facts con-cerning traffic congestion in city streets. The appointment was made by W. J. L. Banham, president of the Board of Trade, following a meeting called by the board with representatives of numerous civic organizations.

Having determined upon a reason for the delays now encountered, this mittee, which has the power to add to its number by inviting others to join it, will make definite recom-mendations for improving conditions. Among Committee's Policy interests of safety and economy. Every business day 200,000 motor cars enter the part of Manhattan lying south of Fifty-ninth Street, it is estimated by engineers, and of these the great majority seek a place to park for varying periods of time. In this section of New York there are only a dozen north and south arteries and the cross streets are narrow, with a few exceptions.

Parking Rule Nullified While there is a rule against parking more than an hour, this is nullified by the practice of automobile owners of going out of their offices occasionally and driving their cars around the block to a new location, the result being a double lane of parked cars on all the cross streets in the business section, thus narrowing to one lane the capacity of

All day I have played in a King's garden, About the feet of the grey castle, Upon steps that knew The whisper of Victorian skirts. In the sunken garden, forget-me-nots, Like the eyes of little birds, Peered in awe at the tall tulips, With their golden helmets bowing in the sun. Trim-cut trees, like dark, green-skirted girls, Stood about the lawn so primly mown: Smeared with snowy daisies, Beyond the castle's grey and sombre walls, Beyond the sophisticated beds of wallflowers, Gold and brown, The woods stretched contentedly. The high chestnuts, with their turrets of white bloom, Had pools of lilac about their feet, and flowers, Ravished by the plundering bees, Lay about the path or swung Like little elves, Caught in the strands of deserted spider webs.

The purple beech, a grand and glistening sultan,

Held court upon a velvet lawn.

All day I have played in a King's garden, And now, from my high window in his castle wall, I can see the placid towers of Eton, Cloaked with twilight, and the Thames, With ponderous, slow-moving barges, Shattering the reflections of willows And a tall church tower. From my high window I can see
One hundred steps,
And there the joiner's daughter plays
With a round vermilion ball. It bounces, and its dull thud is the only sound, Save the croak of crows in the chestnuts, I lean far out and see the town And the little houses, like painted toys, With smoke rising from their chimneys-tenderly.

Down, far down, a scarlet-coated guardsman walks monotonously, And the scarlet of his coat grows fainter and fainter With the increasing night. Behind me, in the room, A candle burns and beckons me Towards the cool adventure of contented sleep.

"Wings Over Europe"

NEW YORK-That remarkable organization, the Theater Guild, has again demonstrated its ability to accomplish the seemingly impossible. It has put on the stage of the Martin Beck Theater a play by Robert Nichols and Maurice Browne which is really not a play at all, and yet we in the audience are convinced that we have been witnessing drama. The production and acting have given this conversational essay, tract, treatise, thesis, or what you will, verisimilitude.

The authors of "Wings Over Europe" present the situation wherein a young genius of an inventor discovers the secret of the control of the power that governs the material atom. The young idealist is about to lay his proven theory before the Cabinet committee, headed by the Prime inter committee in upon the occasion of his first dramatic recital or "one man show," as he called it, at the Town Hall on the afternoon of Dec. 11.

'John Bull Calling," a Drinkwater Sketch

LONDON-In the London Coliseum's present program is a one-act "political parable," by John Drink-water, entitled "John Bull Calling." John Bull lies in bed, apparently in a bad way, but really only suffering from an attack of "nerves." At the other end of the room three doctors (party leaders) are consulting, each pushing the claims of his pet remedy. Meantime John Bull is getting comfort from the homely ministrations of his nurse (Britannia).

man or beast once tamed, this Mexican screen star goes through the usual run of emotional expression with ease, although she falls to invest her characterization with any particular warmth or feeling.

She works strenuously to evoke an impression of untrammeled mountain vigor and vivacity, and succeeds in rounding out a picture of gypsy grace and glamor. In a variety of handsome costumes, she delights the eye as a rather de luxe daughter of a Carpathian tribesman.

Leroy Mason is the bandit in this operatic affair, while Rita Carewe José Crespo, James Marcus and Sam Appel (not to mention a number of delightful bears, both big and little) are the other players involved. The denouement of "Revenge' brings Rascha to her senses, and finds the principal parties harmoniously united in a comfortably fur-nished Carpathian cave, with every prospect rosy. There is much gypsy singing and dancing, with synchronized score.

Baltimore Little Theaters

PECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR BALTIMORE - This city has two little theaters supported to the extent that they can announce four performances a week during the season in their own playhouses. The Peabody Conservatory, Johns Hop-kins University, Goucher College, Maryland Institute of Art, all these furnish candidates of distinct ability in the various constituent arts. A large leisure or semileisure class seeking self-expression add to this group. Add an inherent tendency to evolve and foster something dis-tinctly Baltimore's own, and it is easier to appreciate the reasons for the success of the Play-Arts Guild and the Vagabonds.

The Play-Arts Guild, under the direction of T. M. Cushing, main-tains a Gilbert and Sullivan reper-tory company at the Masque Theater in "Patience." Recently at the Philadelphia Forum they gave "Patience' to an audience of 2900.

This season was so successfully inaugurated with "The Gondoliers" that it will probably be held over until Christmas to satisfy the demand for seats. As soon as possible, revivals of "The Mikado" and "Iolanthe" will be offered, as well as the fourth annual edition of the "Charles Street Follies," an intimate revue with local background. The Guild is then to present Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler," and possibly Christopher Morley's revue, "Behave Yourself."

Chester F. Morrow, a practicing The Leading Lady lawyer, and the company includes Mrs. William Quinn, who was known to the professional stage of Evelyn Varden. The Vagabonds are preparing a revival of "The Playboy of the Western World," by John Synge;

The old-time popular changes" are things of the past. In the case of amateur-producing societies one can understand the difficulties and hitches that might arise. But for the professionals—the specialists the whole thing is simply "a job" or the planning of a model town.

Now all this is true-up to a certain point. It is what happens be-hind the curtain when that point is reached that the most ardent "theater fan" neither dreams of nor realizes. He only sees, hears and knows that it is "all right on the night." And if this is true of shows for which long of the plaudits, the tribute that he runs are expected and prepared for, where money is, comparatively speaking, no object, and where all the important parts are duplicated the battle has been won for him by by efficient understudies—what is the the rank and file. position in regard to Sunday performances and those special, shortrun productions of artistic plays, at little theaters, for which there is nowadays so large and so apprecia-

But of all the slogans that go the round, from the leading actor to the humblest and noisiest scene-shifter, the phrase "It will be all right on the night" is the one that hides the most anxieties and reveals a faith that is seldom unjustified.

You may argue that much of the work of theater-craft is mainly concerned with more or less mechanical issues—lighting, scenery, properties, available. The producer fingers his issues—lighting, scenery, properties, and costume. Only seven days before the opening comes another thunderclap. The leading lady, who was somewhere in a week's run, but sure to be free on the day, is suddenly informed that her play will go on for a further week. She cannot possibly back out, nor spare the money, for, at these special performances, the only ward is service to art, possibly a small allowance for expenses.

Once more the crisis is met-the providence of the theater alone knows how, and at last comes the dress rehearsal. Then there is trouble with the scenery, trouble with the lighting, some of the costumes are not ready, some of the "props" like any other: technical, no doubt, but full of glamorous interest and are missing. The actors, all on edge but full of glamorous interest and easy enough when compared, let us cues are missed. The rehearsal closes say, with the driving of a motorbus in an atmosphere of despair.

But, wonder of wonders, it is "all right on the night." For, in the world of the theater, it is the human equa-tion that provides the ultimate solution of all difficulties-the teamwork of the players that turns apparent failure into success. And at the end, when the producer is called before the curtain to receive his share pays to the work of his company is no mere form of words. the leader of an army, he knows that

Some schools have plunged too deeply at first, as is natural in a deeply at first, as is natural in a revolutionary movement, and chaos, lack of social responsibility, and therefore lack of real freedom, is the present result. Others—and the greater number—are going more slowly, yet intelligently and fear-lessly taking steps forward. There are mistakes, as in all radical ex-perimenting, and among the faculty there are times of perplexity and discouragement, but the nature and number of the successes prove to the progressive teacher that the ideal is a true one. More Done With Lower Schools

More has been done to free the child in his early years of school work than in his later. This is partly because it is sounder to be gin with the foundation work, and partly because the upper schools are held to the old tradition by the "school-leaving" examinations and the college entrance requirements. both based upon the traditional idea of education. Space does not permit me here to outline the numbers of progressive methods evolved in schools throughout the world, but the layman is doubtless hearing increasingly such classifications as the Dalton plan, the Winnetka system of individual instruction, the Decroly method, the Jena plan, the Montes-sori system, the Howard plan, and others. In a sense, each progressive school has its own plan, which is often a combination of many ideas worked out successfully elsewhere but organized along lines original

The Parent

We have called this department "The Parent," but it is not in any sense exclusively for those to whom the actual daily guidance of children has been given. We like to think of it rather as a channel for the parent quality of thought wherever it may be, manifested in all its aspects of love for children and young folks, and of an earnest desire to contribute toward their growth and progress. It is our hope that the letters and short articles sent in to the column by those who are finding this department of special interest, may be not only a means of sharing with many the writers' joy in a true unfoldment of the child thought, but also a means of bringing together through a "grown-ups' mail bag" new friends throughout the world.

Looking down Fifth Avenue on a misty morning is a gift I would like to bestow on all who love beauty as well as a strange and sad thing that we adults can so completely forget how it feels to be a child. Therefore we do not realize that the world of love beauty as a substitute with the unserted as a substitute of the unserted as a subs times, their beauty always seems love beauty as well as to all who wish to revive childhood dreams of fairyland and castles in the air.

All New York is not as lovely as Fifth Avenue, yet, to one whose eyes are open, countless bits of beauty are always being revealed—a striking piece of wrought iron on a dingy house in the midst of the business section about Fourteenth Street; cean liners coming into the bay, the Lewisohn Stadium on a summer evening densely crowded, the audience silent with compelling attention as the Philharmonic plays a bit of De-bussy, hardly audible—I could go on endlessly. I do not feel that I am a provincial New Yorker, for I understand the limitations of living in, and seeing but one city, yet I feel that there are but few other places in which I should like to live.

It is a strange and sad thing that the unseen, as a rule, is more real to a child than what he sees about him. Imagination is often looked upon as a privilege of childhood and youth, to be done away with, the sooner the bedone away with, the sooner the better, in after years. But if we look discovery that his five fingers were closely, we shall see that imagination human beings, each with a character has been a foundation-head of great has been a foundation-nead of great things. Great men of all kinds have self-composed plays and there was no been those who saw visions.

Imagination can be one of the best of fun. There happened to be, and there was no day a box of colored ribbons by

Therefore, irreparable harm can be done to a child, if sufficient food for without faces or dresses. imagination is withheld. This is why a child rarely profits by having its wishes anticipated. This reminds me of a little scene I witnessed once:

A Chair-Leg for a Violin A little boy loved to play the of pretending, which is both the re-violin on a broken chair's leg, with a sult of and the stimulus to his power twig for a bow. Impressed by his enthusiasm and perseverance, a friend of his mother made him a genuine-looking violin. Perfectly delighted the little chap started playlighted the little chap started playing right off. But the strings were lengths of cord and no music came forth. All of a sudden violin and bow were sent flying through the room and the boy burst out crying vehemently. He would not touch enjoy reading the Monitor very much. them again, and his own instruments Problem Sessions I think the Parent Column and the were kicked out of sight. These were children of his imagination, but they meant nothing to him now, for he had been rudely made to realize the poorness of his stick and twig. The unwanted present made him suffer his first bereavement. The wellmeaning friend had been guided by real interest in the child, but she had ignored and thereby wounded his interior forces.

Very often presents are bought with little thought or knowledge of with little thought or knowledge of anyone living in or out of the United the child, and from motives that that organized problem class sessions are now taking its place. do with the child. While each seeks special privileges for itself, the various ports are unanimous in their effort to remove New York's present su-

Some have arranged with the rail-roads to quote low export rates through their ports—rates which, on a distance basis, are far out of line with other charges made by the railways-in an attempt to divert business. Others have sought, both through the Interstate Commerce Commission and the United States Shipping Board, to change the prevailing status so that the rates through ports other than New York will be so favorable as to attract traffic, and through that, ocean vessels to the ports. Thus far, the attempts have not met with great success although some notable changes in the railroad rate scale have been made, in line with the desires of South Atlantic and Gulf

Grain Rusiness

Outstanding in the ports' rivalry is the desire to capture the grain business. While New York does not handle as much grain as does Montreal, it nevertheless gets the bulk of the business moving through United States ports, with more than 100,-000,000 bushels annually being transshipped at New York. If free storage of grain at Philadelphia and Baltimore were permitted by the I. C. C., as now petitioned by those ports, the Port of New York Authority apprehends that a considerable volume of the tonnage would be

The fraction of a cent influences the movement of grain, so narrow is the margin of profit in its handling, and the offer of free storage (which the Port Authority maintains origi-nated with the Western Maryland Railway at Baltimore) would seriously affect the movement of grain through interior elevators to tidewater by the normal routes now and the transfer by tender will be

Air and Steamship Tie-up

The Lloyd Sabaudo Line has acquired the control of the recently organized Italian airplane services in the Mediterranean and in the spring is planning to inaugurate a direct connection between its ships and the airplanes. Two days' time will be saved, it is reported, through the connection at Gibraltar which will permit passengers to leave the "Conte" ships plying from New York and board planes for the continuation of their journey to Genoa, via Barcelona.
The through schedules would then be only 7½ days from New York to Genoa, the present time being 10 days.

Transatlantic Travel Steamship lines operating in the North Atlantic are finding that travel abroad during the winter months is assuming unprecedented proportions.

3 reasons for investing in "Money" companies

YOUR income will not be directly dependent upon trade or industrial conditions, merchandise sales or dis-tribution, saturated markets, and the like, which affect the return on other types of securities.

The Financial Field is indispensable to the nation's economic life. It includes banks, insurance companies and industrial loan companies, which render a valuable public service. These constitute an important part of the country's financial structure.

The securities of "Money" companies are recommended by The HOUSE OF HODSON which has specialized in in-vestment offerings in the Financial Field for 35 years.

QUIET DEMAND

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Dec. 18-

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Dec. 18—
Business in the primary cotton goods market was seasonably quiet last week, and averaged up about the same as the previous week.
The day-to-day selling was mostly made up of filling-in orders. These repeat orders have contributed to make the first half of December better than the corresponding part of November, and on the whole better than last year.

In the print cloth division the most a notable activity was in the 36-inch A goods which sold at 7½ @7%c for the 64x60s, and at 8%c for spots of 68x72s; the same number sold for 8½s for future delivery.

The regular 38½-inch 64x60s 5.35-yard brought 7%c from first hands, But 7%c from second hands. The 68x72s 4.75-yard sold at 87sc, although some sales were made early in_the Buyers at 8%c. The 80 squares 4.00-yard were steady all week at 10%c.

Sheetings were very quiet, although prices were generally held firm. The 80 quares 4.00-yard were steady all week at 10%c.

Sheetings were very quiet, although prices were generally held firm. The 80-yard sold at from 11¼c 8140-inch 2.85-yard sold at from 11¼c 8140-inch 2.85-yard sold at from 11¼c

National Protective Companies has been organized under the laws of Massachusetts and intends to acquire the entire capital stocks (except qualifying shares) of

> LOYAL PROTECTIVE INSURANCE COMPANY OF BOSTON, MASS. RIDGELY PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION OF WORCESTER, MASS.

Both of these companies have been in successful operation for over thirty years.

The combined earnings reported by the two companies to the Massachusetts Insurance Commissioner for the last five years (including 1928 estimated but not reported) have averaged $97,617 per annum. Net savings (after income tax adjustments) due to the elimination of certain nonrecurring charges in administrative expense would amount to $189,735. Certain additional savings resulting from the joint operation of the two companies, estimated at $57,307, result in total indicated earnings of $344,659, all as computed by Messrs. Woodward, Fondiller & Ryan, Consulting Actuaries.

The corresponding net earnings for each of the five years during this period were as follows:

Stock market activity is said to be largely responsible for savings bank withdrawals in November. Widespread raising of interest rates on deposits by savings banks lately was designed to offset these withdrawals.

A Word a Day

Potent

Every Latin student who has learned potens, "powerful," may recognize in this word the original form almost unchanged. Our adjective continues to mean powerful but it has a few finer shades of meaning which one should understand as well.

One who has potent faculties should use them wisely as an able, capable sovereign would do. The very name suggests latent strength which may produce the most far-reaching effects and might involve countless numbers of people. A character which can influence others should influence them for good.

-A Thought for Today -

Well, first they filled a wheelbar row with snow-filled it to overflow ing-then, when the snow was piled up well above the top they pressed it all down hard with an iron spade till it was just one frozen mass But it was rather large like that, so they chopped it up very carefully with the spade, and there, all lying neatly packed together, were the nicest little bricks you ever sawgenuine snow ones, to build the nouse with.

It took them quite a time to make the bricks, for they needed such a lot, but at last they had enough, and lot, but at last they had enough, and then the building began in earnest. The frame of a large oblong box formed the doorway, the door itself being a piece of board hung on leather hinges and the frame of a rather smaller box made the window. Two sides of a large packing case formed the roof, and what do you think was the chimney? An old-fashioned muff box, with the bottom knocked out! All these things, howknocked out! The situation created a problem for not a few passengers, who had undertaken the journey without anticipating such a delay and without carrying sufficient funds to provide for the food and the incidentals which it involved. One elderly man, traveling alone, seemed especially perturbed, and, observing him scanning the coins which his purse contained, a fellow passenger slipped into the seat beside him and engaged

In a tactful manner he learned that the elderly man was indeed disturbed. Some self-denial which he had been practicing in the matter of food did not especially distress him, but he did wish that he might telegraph the wife he had left behind, and the son to whom he was journeying; they must be anxious to learn of him and his welfare, since his arrival was long overdue, and in the confusion of the rerouting of the train would probably be unable to learn even of his whereabouts. Twelve Seconds Up!

DERHAPS no similarly brief an interval has been so momentous as those twelve seconds in which the Wright Brothers' clumsy airplane made its first flight over the wind-swept sand dunes of Kitty Hawk, N. C., twenty-five years ago yesterday. A quarter of a century has followed that event, and today Europe and the United States are covered with aerial routes. Henry Ford, a member of the International Air Conference commemorating the anniversary, is turning out big trimotored duralumin machines at the rate of three a week, capable of carrying a dozen passengers hundreds of miles without refueling.

That is no more than other leading manufacturers are doing. The air field at Paris, Le Bourget, sees French, English, Dutch, Belgian and German flying machines arriving and departing daily. It embarked 38,000 passengers in 1927. Fokker and Junker airplanes are carrying larger and larger loads from Berlin, London and other capitals. In the United States, last year, it is estimated that 30,000,000 miles were flown by other than military flyers. These and similar achievements were the outcome of that first twelve seconds' flight. The graceful, birdlike craft of today is the lineal descendant of that pusher-type machine, carrying one man and powered by a home-built four-cylinder engine.

Wilbur Wright won the toss on Dec. 14, 1903, and the flip of the coin meant that he should have the first try with the untested machine. His brother ran beside it as it came down Kill Devil Hill on the monorail track, but the driver tried too sharp an upward turn, the engine stalled and the machine grounded with damage that took two days to repair.

Three days later Orville sat in the same seat. This time Wilbur stood beside him. A stiff, cold wind was blowing. Ahead, members of the Kitty Hawk Life Guard Station waited to applaud or rescue. The engine coughed and started. Orville Wright released the wire. Slowly, against the wind, the machine came forward. Wilbur was easily able to run beside and support the wing. It began to pick up speed. Faster the airplane went, and faster. Then it was off the ground.

One, two, three! The timer counted the seconds on the stop watch. They seemed to come slowly. The machine was staying aloft; the engine was propelling it; man was flying.

Four, five, six! Now the airplane was bobbing erratically, up and down, and side to side. The first human flyer was trying to curb his new element-Icarus, inept at the controls. Seven, eight, nine! Now the life guards, Bob Westcott, Tom Beachem and "Uncle Benny" O'Neal, gasped, for the machine was obviously unman-

The airplane was down. There was a shout. The bicycle repairmen of Dayton had proved their case. Other flights were made immediately, and before the day ended one of fifty-nine seconds, for a distance of 832 feet, had been achieved. But that first flight of a heavier-thanair machine was the one that made history. It had carried the airplane forward 120 feet in air against the wind. It had lasted twelve seconds.

Twelve seconds! Truly a short time in a day's work, yet long enough to mark the end of one epoch and the beginning of another.

A Stronger France

NE astonishing-though why call it astonishing?—fact stands out from the waters of pessimism that "wash earth's human shores." It is the constant tale of prosperity. It comes from every country. It is unmistakable in the United States and, at least in a relative sense, it is characteristic of Europe.

The increased well-being of Europe is reflected in the report of J. R. Cahill, the Commercial Counsellor of the British Embassy in Paris. He analyzes the economic situation in France, and he finds that not only has France recovered from the disabilities that were placed upon it by the war, but also she has gone on to greater things. This is no argument against the receipt of reasonable reparations from Germany, nor should it affect in one way or another the question of payments to the United States. It is just a simple statement of the truth—that France is not weaker, but is actually much stronger, than it was before the war.

Very much the same verdict could be passed on other countries, notably on Germany; and it is wrong to suppose that the United States has alone profited in some way by the war while European nations have suffered. Destruction cannot of course be good, but it has stimulated certain countries, in particular France, to exceptional efforts. The results are highly creditable. They encourage the hope that the world has entered upon a period of general prosperity. There can indeed be no doubt of this, provided there are no more upheavals. At first France was a tragic victim. But in a few years the ruined north was built up. Then other problems, of industry, of trade, of finances, were tackled. One can scarcely express too strongly one's admiration for the spectacular monetary reform effected by M. Poincaré. But no less deserving of admiration is the reorganization of industry on broader lines. It was thought that commerce was favored by the fall of the franc, and that with the stabilization of the franc it would slump. Dexterous guidance has avoided this difficulty.

France's recovery and advance is not the out-come of what is called chance. It is due to quiet, patient, unremitting work, to careful planning, and one should not be misled by the political turmoil that is often conspicuous in the news from France. Underneath, many other forces are at work-forces that are not disturbed by parliamentary quarrels. They are material, but they are also moral. If France can show such splendid results in the economic sphere, it is largely because there has been a moral reawakening.

Roald Amundsen

THE discovery of the south pole by Roald Amundsen, just seventeen years ago, with Norway's acclaim of her intrepid son, is finding its response wherever deeds of valor are appreciated.

Whoever will contemplate the achievements of this modern viking must confess to a feeling of admiration for Captain Amundsen, not only because he contributed notably toward the better knowledge of the polar regions, but also because he possessed an incentive that carried much further than the discovery of the geographically unknown. In an hour when the Byrd expedition, equipped as no other expedition before it, is entering where Amundsen blazed the way, it is no discredit to the Byrd enterprise to recall that the Norwegian explorer. to whom all the world is today paying tribute, had to place his reliance on ships and dogs, as far as it concerned his outfit for the penetration of those desolate and icy wastes.

Roald Amundsen belonged to a school of explorers which, including Peary, must go down in arctic history as pioneers, through whose efforts others could later in greater safety follow whither they led. But apart from exploration as such, Captain Amundsen saw, as behind his own and similar ventures, much more than those things on which humankind usually places reliance, for in his view the trail breaker is an indispensable ally of those higher values which advance and sustain civilization. The navigation of the Northwest Passage, the attainment of both poles and the first crossing of the Polar Sea by Roald Amundsen must perforce remain a monument of heroic effort, a symbol of devotion to an idea: to seek, to strive, to find, and not to yield. It is perhaps needless to add that, as he was among the first to accept navigation of the air as a means for polar exploration, so in his attempt to succor the second Nobile expedition he displayed a self-sacrifice that by itself stands as an unexampled chapter of arctic history.

A Common Task for Wets and Drys

THERE is one point on which the wets and the drys ought to be willing to come to a working agreement. Both are roundly dissatisfied with the grave abuses which have marked the operation of the prohibition law. No prohibitionist is content with such a state of affairs, nor is he particularly happy that such a stanch dry as Prof. Irving Fisher has to give to a second book the title, "Prohibition Still at Its Worst."

It needs no argument to say that the wets are similarly discontented, and rightly, with the conditions of Bootlegging, political corruption and disrespect for law, for which the violation ment has sponsible. It is, indeed, these very abuses that have arisen under prohibition which its opponents have used as their principal reasons against the law. That such conditions should not be tolerated, all are agreed. What, then, can be done about it?

The wets would like prohibition either repealed or so modified as to permit light wines and beer, a step which would require the passage of another constitutional amendment.

No such amendment can be passed, because too many citizens of the United States are convinced that they are better off with prohibition than without it. The opponents of the law have frequently admitted this fact.

The drys would like prohibition more widely obeyed and better enforced. They would like to see its abuses stamped out and its merits given a larger and less hampered opportunity to demonstrate themselves.

Are the opponents of prohibition honestly desirous of removing the abuses of which they justly complain? Their honesty is not questioned. And if they are honest with themselves. they should be mindful of the responsibilities which fall on them in the common task of every citizen to set an example of obedience to law and to encourage its enforcement. The time for rancor and bitterness over the subject of prohibition has passed, and this applies to dry and wet alike. The time has come when co-operation ought to be forthcoming in giving to the prohibition law a fair test, and when the press of the Nation-wet and dry alike-will answer these temperate and well-reasoned words from Prof. Thomas N. Carver, the distinguished Harvard economist:

Our appeal is simply this: Don't aid and abet those who are actively breaking a law which your Government is actively trying to enforce.

Don't muddle the minds of your readers by confusing an active law with an obsolete law. Don't encourage anyone to think that it is either smart or clever, courageous or honorable to outwit your Government. Don't excuse e bootlegger or his patron.

Don't vilify enforcement officers who are trying to do what the law requires them to do and what they have sworn to do. If you want to castigate any of them, try it on those who are shirking their duty. Don't caricature or cast aspersions upon those private citizens who are not only obeying the law, but trying to help the Government. This will not weaken their determination; it will only en-courage law breakers and add to the cost of enforcement. In short, throw your vast influence on the side of your Government and not against it.

In appraising the nature of the opposition to prohibition in the United States, it is essential to realize that the violators of the law make their own evidence with which they assail the law, and that the activities of such organizations as the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment contribute to the laxity of enforcement and the disrespect for law which their members profess to deplore.

Prohibition is an active law which the United States is actively trying to enforce, and until its opponents are willing to lend their co-operation to its enforcement, or at least to cease encouraging its violation, what right have they to Centenaries: More or Less .

THE present year, in many parts of the world, has enjoyed an abundant crop of centenary celebrations-including bicentenaries, tercentenaries, and quater-centenaries. In November all the English-speaking world was talking about Bunyan; in December, about Edmund Burke; and early in 1929 the people will be asked to remember Joseph Jefferson, the greatest, perhaps, of American comedians. Within the last twelve months centenary honors have been paid to Ibsen, George Meredith, Tolstoy, Jules Verne, Francisco Goya, Captain Cook, Oliver Goldsmith, D. G. Rossetti, and Franz Schubert. Nor have the recorders failed to call attention to the fact that just 400 years ago William Tyndale defended the liberty he took in venturing to translate the Bible, in "The Obedience of a Christian Man."

Some may ask whether there is any value in this ritual of centenaries, beyond the fact that they gratify lecturers, afford an excuse for new editions, and provide a topic of conversation. Even these, however, are reasons for their being which are not to'be despised. No mean part of present-day knowledge comes from the daily interchange of ideas about the events that are happening, politicians making history, natural scientists unfolding new theories, new books just published, strange countries explored or revisited. All this, the vivid consciousness of the present, is clearly enriched if there can be added thereto a vivid consciousness of the past. And here centenaries help. For they not merely furnish some bare knowledge of the facts of history. They set everyone, everywhere, talking of this or that great man who lived a century or two ago, just as today everyone, everywhere, is talking of Herbert Hoover or Bernard Shaw. In this way the incident-or shall one call it the conspiracy-of the centenary serves to introduce men of the past into the social life of the present.

For Bigger and Better Chess

CENOR CAPABLANCA, the ex-champion chess player of the world, has caused a flutter among the devotees of that ancient game by a letter to the London Times, in which he complains that for experts chess is now becoming so dull an occupation that to all intents and purposes it may be considered as a thing of the past. Experience and memorized knowledge, he argues, will soon make a draw between champions a foregone conclusion, thus bringing to an end world tournaments with the fame and publicity which follow in their wake.

It may be questioned if such a dire result would at all affect the popularity of chess as a pastime among the less endowed but innumerable mortals whose ambition does not run to acrobatic feats of memorization, but who are content humbly to extract the ounce of enjoyment within their power by checkmating their opponent, even at the risk of endangering a friendship of many years. But Senor Capablanca's drastic remedy of enlarging the chessboard to 100 squares and of adding two new pieces on each side of the king and queen, one endowed with the powers of a rook and knight and the other with those of a bishop and knight, not only affects the nature of the game as played for centuries in every country of the world, but also threatens to sever the historical continuity which invests a game like chess with the glamour of tradition and links up the most intellectual amusement of modern times with the magic of long-lost kingdoms.

For chess was, according to one legend, invented as far back as 5000 years ago by a Queen of Ceylon, in order to amuse and instruct her husband in the art of war while an enemy was besieging his metropolis. Since that time, however, chess has become an exceedingly peaceful

With the increased use of the riveting machine, to say nothing of other labor-saving devices, it is no wonder that the movement against noise should take on fresh vigor. Leo Theremin, the man who brings music from the air, is said to foresee the use of a device which will shut out all noise, when desired, but perhaps it would be better to save any enthusiastic reception for the time when it is made available. Carlyle tried to shut out noises in the street near his dwelling in Chelsea, London, by building a room within a room, but all he succeeded in doing was to shut out the near-by sounds, the distant noises filtering through just the same. If Carlyle found London noisy in the nineteenth century, one wonders how, in 1928, he would regard New York, in the neighborhood of a steel skyscraper in process of erection.

Latin America Enters the News: Uruguay and Brazil

By WALLACE THOMPSON

This is the seventh of a series of articles on the countries being visited by Mr. Hoover on his journey through

Latin America. It deals with Uruguay and Brazil

Oriental or "Eastern Strip" of Spanish colonial days is as near a modern realization of Utopia as can be found, perhaps, in the world. It lies just across the Rio de la Plata from Argentina, of which nation it was once a part, but the "River Plate," as the English call it, is there about 100 miles wide, while the cities of Buenos Aires and Montevideo, the Uruguayan capital, are an overnight boat trip apart. The Republic of Uruguay seems small, as it lies there between the vast areas of Argentina and Brazil (with which alone it shares the immense eastern coast of South America), but actually its area of 72,152 square miles is a little more than New England and over twice that of Portugal. Its population is 1,720,000. Small or large, however, it is one of the most progressive nations in the Americas.

It is compared to Utopia in a literal sense, for few peoples in the world have so deep and sincere a sense of responsibility for good government, and have made such conscious efforts to find a means toward permanent good government. The country has seen many experiments in administration, and under its Constitution of 1918 the executive power is divided between a President and a Council of Administration, the latter controlling the functioning of the Government touching the lives of the people, and the President that dealing with broader matters, including foreign relations. The Council is composed in part of representatives of the minority party, on the theory of proportional representation. For Uruguay has a definite party system, with two leading parties, named, simply, the Whites and the Reds, a designation that goes back to revolutionary times and has nothing to do with radicals and modern "tories," although it happens that the Reds are the liberals and the Whites the conservatives in modern Uruguayan politics.

1 1 1 The Uruguayan Constitution may be said to be still an experiment. But the Uruguayans are sincere students of politics, and have an even more elaborate system of registration and compulsory suffrage than have the Argentines, while their progress in democracy is one of the certainties about Latin America's future history. It is this interest in experiments, this sincere study of means and methods and systems, that will bring to Mr. Hoover his closest and most interesting contacts with the statesmen of Uruguay. For Uruguay has stood frankly and eloquently for the simultaneous proclamation of the Monroe Doctrine by all the nations of the Americas.

The Uruguayans have suggested, and indeed officially presented, at the Fifth Pan-American Congress in Santiago, Chile, in 1923, a code embodying the plan of having all the nations of the hemisphere coguarantors of the inviolability of all the Americas. Many of the most sincere well-wishers for Pan-American solidarity, as well as many in the United States who seek, behind today's confusions for the bases of inter-American co-operation, hold that this question of a common support by all the nations of the ideals of the Monroe Doctrine is the sine qua non of any successful rapprochement between the United States and the greater nations of Latin America.

Uruguay is a busy and prosperous country, with many ties to the United States, and problems that parallel, in part, those of Argentina in relation to the United States. It is a great cattle country, and an important sheep country. The relatively sparse population has most of the area of the country under control, although a great part of it is, of course, grazing land. Hardly a spot is sterile, however, the climate is even and temperate, and the rainfall of from forty to fifty inches a year makes its mighty rolling fields potentially rich gardens, although still to be turned to the plow. Still a vast grazing range, and since 1863 the source of most of the beef extract of the world, Uruguay, with thousands of fine cattle, now controls a notable share of the large exports of beef, mutton and their products from South America. Uruguay has yet to move fully into the class of a great producer of farm products, so that it is not yet competitive with | and national efficiency to the highest degree.

THE Eastern Republic of the Uruguay-the old Bards | United States farmers as to wheat and maize, as is Argentina; but it has much the same problems over present and prospective tariffs on the products of the grazing ranges, as has its larger sister across the River

> The Republic of Brazil, occupying two-thirds of the Atlantic seacoast of South America, and extending westward to the foothills of the Andes, comprises an area larger than continental United States, and produces a variety of natural resources probably greater than those of any other nation in the world. The traveler on a fast steamship northward from Rio de Janeiro is three days at sea before he sees about him the turgid yellow waters which the Amazon sends 200 miles from shore into the Atlantic, and for two days more the dim low coast to the westward is still Brazilian soil.

The area of Brazil is about 3,250,000 square miles, and its population is placed at nearly 40,000,000. Within the next twenty-five years it expects to have 50,000,000 population, and to have passed both France and Italy in numbers of people. It is true that of this vast population perhaps three-quarters, today, are uncivilized savages, most of whom hardly know that the Republic of Bazil exists, so limitless is the unexplored wilderness of the Amazon basin. But the population of the Atlantic littoral is increasing by the immigration of industrious Germans, Italians and other peoples from Europe, and the 10,-000,000 expected in the next quarter of a century will be largely of the fine, strong strains from Europe, who for the last twenty-five years have been finding their way into the rich, new lands of modern Brazil.

Rio de Janeiro, the capital of Brazil, is the most beautifully situated city in the world-a statement quite unchallenged. Towering, steep mountains, and clusters of matchless bays, tropical vegetation and jewellike islands, constitute its setting, and there its rulers, from the earliest times, have lavished their wealth and made the city itself a capital of splendor. It now has nearly 2,000,000 inhabitants, nearly a full dozen of the finest hotels to be found anywhere, and palaces of the wealthy strung on magnificent curving avenues, finely paved. Its botanical garden is unsurpassed in the world.

+ + + A second city, Sao Paulo, boasts nearly 1,000,000 inhabitants, and is one of the busiest and most progressive cities in either of the Americas. There are also half a dozen other cities of more than 100,000 people, and behind them the unscratched resources of a territory 250,000 square miles larger than continental United States. Much of this virtually unexplored country is in the valley of the Amazon River, navigable to ocean steamers for 3000 miles from its mouth, and served by a tremendous network of vast rivers whose names are quite unknown to the outside world.

Great rivers belonging to the system of the River Plate in the south tap other portions of Brazil, and the total of navigable streams reaches the almost unbelievable total of 30,000 miles. In the Amazon Valley grows wild the rubber plant, whose seeds, shipped abroad years ago, despite a strict embargo, have given the world the immense rubber plantations of the Far East.

With this mightiest of all the countries of Latin America, the United States is at profound peace, with no issue of possible importance standing between the two. Brazil has been a consistent and determined contributor to this peace. Since Dom Pedro II, in 1876, visited the States, the progress of Brazil has been firmly patterned upon that of its northern-its older-friend among the nations.

The future of Brazil quite baffles imagination. It has steadily gained strength and stability, and its President Washington Luiz, has brought the country to a high standard of political and economic power. Although not an engineer by profession, he is in many ways the engineer in thought and action, a great road builder, a far-sighted planner, a devotee of the ideals of personal

From the World's Great Capitals-Paris

PARIS TT IS extremely difficult to explain the ministerial instability of France to countries where the party system prevails. In the United States, for example, after the presidential election, the minority bows to the majority and there cannot be question of ministerial upheavals. In Britain, too, a government can properly count upon a fairly long existence. But in France there are no parties, but only groups. Some of these have only a few members—a dozen or so—while the largest group in the Chamber does not number many more than 100 adherents. Now these groups have no working arrangement, no specific doctrines, and they can be combined in a hundred different ways. The combinations are constantly changing because, with each change, there is a set of ministers. Those who are not ministers, but who hope to be, have therefore every inducement to en-courage the shifting of the balance. Only when an exceptional man appears in exceptional circumstances do the groups consent to remain stationary.

A high steel structure—a spiderlike disposition of bars on which is placed a platform-stands on the Place de l'Opéra. A police agent mounts this platform, and from his high perch directs the traffic. This is the "mirador," with which an experiment is being conducted. Hitherto to cope with the flood of vehicles in the heart of Paris there have been police agents on foot and police agents on horseback. Those beautiful glossy horses, perfectly motionless in the swirl of automobiles, were a curious sight. Now a steel watch tower has been built, and its occupant, raised high above the vortex, can survey the whole scene, and reach his decisions in good time. Paris is looking on at this experiment with a considerable amount of interest.

The genius of the French language is clarity. Yet recent writers who have won considerable reputation have deliberately aimed at obscurity. The more obscure they could make their poems, the better those poems were supposed to be. Their prose, too, was a puzzle. Against this tendency, however, there is reaction. Vigorous writers like Henri Béraud have condemned the enigmatic school, but until this moment there has been no definite group which has tried to uphold the traditions of precision and clearness. Now several young poets have issued a manifesto. They call themselves the Clartéistes, and they declare themselves in opposition to the Obscuristes. The issue is joined, the struggle will be hard. The poets who affect to be abstruse are numerous, and they have their faithful public. It may be that their books are bought not so much to be read and understood as to be kept until the price of first and special editions rises. What has given strength to the Obscuristes is precisely the existence of commercial speculation in books That is why so many French writers of today stand in need of translators for their own countrymen! The Clartéistes, on the contrary, declare that one can still be an artist in words while expressing plainly and limpidly one's thought.

After being a Protectorate for twenty years, Morocco has developed enormously. It is noted that the external trade of Morocco in 1912 amounted to 150,000,000 francs. In 1923 the figure of 1,000,000,000 was reached. In 1927 the total was 2,516,000,000. Moreover, the bulk of this trade is export trade. Exports amounted to 1,730,000,000, and only 786,000,000 were imported. Particularly is the improvement to be observed during the last few years in wheat and in phosphates. There is every hope that this development, wonderful as it is, will prove to be only a beginning, and that the next few years will witness s still quicker growth.

Gardens for children! These open spaces in the crowded city will be reserved exclusively for children. They will be modeled after similar gardens at Amsterdam and Brussels. Such is the happy initiative of the Paris authorities; and there is one square to be made for children near the Dupleix school, and others are to be reserved for the youngsters in the Bois de Vincennes and in the Bois de Boulogne. In course of time, it is hoped to add many others. The expense is relatively trivial. It is only necessary to find the suitable spaces to be railed in, to make grass plots and sand pits, and a little pavilion in which toys can be guarded. There will also be a service of nursemaids. In this way, children can be taken to play by themselves in the open air with complete and perfect

What would you do if you were told to measure the holes in the street? Can you picture yourself with a yardstick crawling along a thoroughfare on hands and knees, perhaps with a little red flag cleverly mounted on some fixture above your back? Could you possibly consider this dignified, even if you did belong to the street department? After all, it is one thing to dust off a lamp and another to lay a tape across a hole in the street. This discussion arises from the fact that the members of the Paris service were instructed to study the pavements and report on the number of holes in a hectometer, the average diameter of the holes and their average depth. They refused. Louis XIV had never asked such a thing, nor had Napoleon. The girth, therefore, of the holes in the streets may never be known, nor their depth.

Douglas Fir Seeds for France

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

It was with great interest that I read in The Christian Science Monitor of November 20 an editorial note stating that Douglas fir seeds were to be planted in the wartorn areas of France, and that these seeds were being requested from the department of agriculture of the University of Oregon.

In this connection I wish to explain that the university has no department of agriculture, but the School of Agriculture in this State is located at Corvailis as a part of the Oregon State Agricultural College, while the university is located at Eugene. These two institutions are in no way connected, each having its own board of regents and president. The Oregon State College embraces the various schools of engineering, forestry, agriculture, commerce, and home economics, while the university maintains the other courses, as law, medicine, commerce, and the usual subjects which are given for a Bachelor of Arts degree. It may interest you to know that the American Tree Association of Washington, D. C., and the Federal Forest Service have already supplied some seeds for reforesta-tion in France, but thus far the State of Oregon (much to my regret) has furnished none. Keasey, Ore.
